HORSESHOE CRABS.

The Necessity For Turning Them Over In the Aquarian Pool.

It is not an unusual occurrence at the aquarium for some humane visitor to approach an attendant and say:

"There's a horseshoe crab turned over on its back in the pool bere, and it can't get back agsin. Won't you please come and turn it over?"

The attendant gets a dip net and climbs on to the coping around the pool in which the big horseshoe crabs are kept and reaches down in the wa ter with it and turns the horseshoe right side up, whereupon the crab moves off comfortably.

This, however, as done in such case spon request, is only what sooner or later the attendant would have done of his own second, for they here keep an eye on the horseshoes as they do on all the other impounded creatures.

It might perhaps be wondered if the horseshoe crab has to have a man to keep it turned over here what it does In the broad open water in which it finds a home, quite spart from man and where it can't have any such as The answer is that in its natural home the conditions are very different and that there it is able to

The horseshoe crab has a long, stiff, spikelike tall, which is joined to its body with an attachment that works like a hinge. In the sea when a horseshoe gets turned over on its back it digs the point of its tall into the sand mud on the bottom, and with that to hold by it raises the tail end of its advantageous position and tall belying some as a lever the horse shoe is able to turn itself over.

In an aquarium pool, which is fined with porcelain tiles so that it can be kept clean, the horseshoe crab can't do this, because there it can't find sand or mud to stick its tall into to get a brace. Occasionally a horseshoe that has been overturned will by chance get the tip of its tail into the angle formed by the floor and the wall of the pave and so, with something to hold against, get leverage enough to turn itself over, but generally the big overturned horseshoes lie on their backs in the pool until they are righted.

The righting up of the horseshoes always interests the people standing around the pool, among whom there are likely to be some who view it with a more serious pleasure. A woman said to an attendant who had just turned over two big horseshoe crabs:

"I am glad to see that you treat them with kindness."

A Woman's "No."

There are plenty of happy marriages which have begun with "no" and endwith "yes." It frequently bappens that the woman who refeses the first time consents willingly upon the sec-ond or third. Nor is the reason for this far to seek. The woman who answers with a negative often does so believing that if her suitor really means what he says he will not accept dismissal without making an effort to reverse her decision. The astute lover, when declined as a husband, begs humbly for friendship and proceeds to make himself necessary to his lady love's comfort and happiness. studies her tastes, humors her whims is always on hand when needed, yet never in the way. In short, he playe the part of "cavaller servant" adroitly that some day when he beindylove wakes up to the knowledge that he has become indispensable to her, a part of her life, which, withdrawn, leaves a sense of lack, a vold. Most fortresses will capitulate if the stege be long enough and well conduct-ed, and the rule holds good in love as former days and doings in England and Scotland

In 1831 Scott was invited to a breakfast at an Edinburgh house. He was ers that were served piping hot that one of the feminine guests went to the market the next day to order some for him to be sent to Sussex place, where he was staying.
"I don't send so far," said the fish-

"I am sorry," said the lady. "The order was for Sir Walter Scott."
The rough fishmonger started back, then pushed forward to the lady through his piles of fish.
"For Sir Walter Scott, did you say.

madam? Sir Walter Scott? Bless my soul, he shall have them directly if I have to carry them myself! Bir Walter Scott! They shall be with him to-night." Then pausing, "No, not tonight, for tomorrow morning a fresh cargo comes in, and he shall have them for his breakfast. Sir Walter Scott?"

The Burning of Green Weed.
Every one who enjoys sitting by a wood fire must have observed how the wood sputters and hisses and frequently gives off little jets of finnes and how the places crackle and fly off at a considerable distance. This is caused a considerable distance. This is caused by the water in the wood, which, confined in the cells, becomes heated and generates steam. It is a curious fact that intense heat and intense cold produce fractures in various substances. In the most extreme cold weather it is not uncommon, especially if the cold has come on suddenly, to find trees that are split from the ground to the top by the action of frost. Freezing expands the water is the cells of the wood, and so suddenly is this done that the trees burst as would a pitcher or mug in wards water was confined.

SNUFFBOXES.

Once Held an Important Part In the Councils of Nations.

No longer applicable is an old diplomat's advice to "take smill often and slowly," yet according to the Hon. John W. Foster, author of "The Practice of Diplomacy," the time was when snuffloxes held an important part in the councils of nations. The present which the Spanish government tendered to General Pinckney in 1795 and which congress withheld from him was a gold snuffbor. The British plenipotentiary who attended the conferences at the close of the Napoleonic wars received as pres ents twenty-four snuffboxes of the value of $1,000 each. Richly jeweled boxes were the diplomatic fashion a century and more ago, but the fashlon has changed

As a reminder of the olden time, Bir Charles Russell, afterward lord chief justice of England, the British senior ounsel in the Bering sea arbitration at Paris in 1893, a great collector of historic anuffboxes, carried a precio one and was constantly offering its contents to his colleagues

After the treaty of 1856 was coulcluded with Persia the American minister to Turkey, who signed it, wrote to the secretary of state: "I would suggest the following pres A dismond snuffbox of the value of $4,000 for the shah; to Mirza Agbra Khau, the grand vizier, a diamond snuffbox to the value of $3,000; to Farrukh Khan, with whom the treaty was negotiated, another of the san value; to Mirza Ahmed Khan, the Persian charge at Constantinopie, a diamond spuffbox to the value of

YPSILANTI.

Nearly Four Hundred Ways of Spell ing the Name

Curious postal officers in Michigan and Washington have been keep for years past a record of the different ways Ypsilanti has been spelled on mall matters, and by comparing the notes they have preserved a list of veritable orthographic wonders has been compiled. This list easily estab-lishes the claim that more different ways for spelling Ypsilanti have been devised than for spelling any other geographical name in America.

In all no less than 372 distinct ways of spelling the name have been counted, and it is probable that the greater number, perhaps all, have been used in good faith by persons who actually believed that the orthographic comb nations reproduced were the correct nations reproduced were the correct combinations for representing Ypsi-lanti on the written or printed page. Every letter in the alphabet except "R" has been used as the initial letter of the name, though why so obvious a combination as Rypsilanti should be neglected when others much less ob-vious have been employed is difficult to explain. As a matter of fact the to explain. As a matter of fact the variations in the spelling are chiefly confined to the first syllable, "Y" being a letter lacking or having only au indifferent standing in many foreign languages.

Tipsy Lanti and Zyp Silanti are me with, and among the spellings farthest away from the accepted and official standard are Whypsorianter and Hip-asslandder.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Sawfish. More energetic than any other sharks are the sawlish, whose snouts are pro-louged into a broad blade of cartilage, which is horisontal when the fish is swimming in a normal position and has both its edges set with slightly curved teeth about an inch apart. The end of this formidable looking weapon is blunt and comparatively soft, so that it is quite incapable of the feats ed, and the rule holds good in love as well as in war.—Chicago Tribune.

A Hero Worshiper.

There is testimony to Sir Walter Scott's popularity with all classes in the "Burford Papers," a chronicle of former days and doings to Project it feeds upon the soft enume, we are apparently the only food it can eat from the poculiar shape of its mouth. It has an enormous number of small teeth, sometimes as many as fifty rows in one individual, but they avidently unfit for the rough are evidently unfit for the rough duties required of their teeth by the garbage eating members of the fam-

National Gardons.

There are two gardens of England—namely, Kent and Worcestershire. That of Ireland is usually said to be Carlow, in Leinster. Italy and Beigium are both called the garden of Europe, while that of France is Amboles, in the department of indre-et-Loire. The garden of first Antere of Italy is Richly and of first Antere of Italy in Richly and of first Anteres of Italy in Richly and of Italy in Richly and of Italy in Richly and I den of Italy is Sicily and of Spain An-dalusis. In the east Ceylon and Bur-ma have both received the title, and the district of India so honored is Ouds. Glamorganshire is often spoken of as the garden of south Wales. To the region west of our noble Missis-sippi the title "garden of the world" has been given.

A Good Answer.

In a public school examination an eccentric examiner demanded, "What views would King Aifred take of universal suffrage and printed books if he were living now?" The ingenious pupil wrote in answer. "If King Aifred were alive he would be too old to take any interest in anything." — London Telegraph.
